BOSTON, Aug. 11.—The first of a series of new and involved legal moves to save Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti from the electric chair were under way today.

Decision on the question of permitting the bill of exceptions to his dismissal of the petition for a writ of error made by the defense to go to the full bench of the State Supreme Court is to come from Judge George A. Sanderson.

Pending the decision, other legal proceedings were held in abeyance by defense lawyers, led by former District Attorney Arthur D. Hill.

The petition for a writ of error was brought on the ground of alleged prejudice by Trial Judge Webster Thayer.
The "evidence" was a series of affidavits recounting alleged conversations by the jurist and his alleged "unfair" attitude on the bench in connection with the radical beliefs of Sacco and Vanzetti. An investigating committee of Governor Alvan T. Fuller, however, found that while the judge was "indiscreet" in conversations outside the court room, on the bench he was fair and impartial.

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—Sacco and Vanzetti still live.

Through the high slitted windows of Charlestown Prison they glimpsed today the pallid light of another day.
It was a day they had not expected to see, and one which they did not know they were going to see until a scant half hour before they were to have taken the short march to the electric chair.

Fiction writers often feature "an eleventh hour reprieve." The twelve-day respite given the condemned murders of South Braintree last night by Governor Alvan T. Fuller was literally that. It was 11:27 p. m. when Warden William Hendry stalked down the corridor in front of their cells and informed them that the Governor and his executive council had granted an opportunity to their counsel to make one last fight before the State courts to save them from the yawning chair in the room beyond. They were doomed to die a few minutes past 12 o'clock.

Outside the prison were more than 800 police and State troopers, armed and vigilant. Behind a "deadline" were bristling machine guns and flaring floodlights. Their presence attested to the fears and the precautions against trouble that the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti entailed. In Boston itself and far beyond, in New York, Chicago, London, Paris, Berlin, Moscow, all over the world, were innumerable thousands waiting word of their death. Probably no other condemned murderers in the history of the world left such a waiting audience, or had so many thousands wrought up over their impending passing.

EMPLOYMENT SITUATION
SHOWS NO IMPROVEMENT

Few Major Industries Show Slight Indications Of Revival, However

MANY UNEMPLOYED

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 11 (I.N.S.) —Little improvement is noted in the employment situation in the State based on the reports of the employment offices of the Department of Labor and Industry made public today by Charles A. Waters, secretary.

The major industries, while showing some signs of expected revival in the fall, at the present time are either furloughing additional employees or operating with reduced forces.

Although the building and construction industry is below normal for the year and at the present time, large public improvements in the cities are taking care of many unemployed in other lines of industry. The amount of house and apartment building is far below normal.

This situation together with the activity of the Department of Highways also has reduced the supply of unemployed unskilled and semi-skilled workers.

Practically all of the offices report a large surplus of truck drivers and stenographers. The Johnstown office reported that apparently truck driving was a "highly contagious occupation," and that a large number of applicants always were on the waiting list. The Allentown and Reading offices also make the usual mention of the large number of truck drivers for whom they are unable to find jobs. The offices report difficulty in placing bookkeepers and stenographers who have not had experience.

Both the anthracite and bituminous fields report generally slack conditions. In the bituminous field the strike and complications regarding the union status of many miners and mines affected practically all lines of industry.

Although conditions in the metal industries are also below normal, several of the offices reported that indications pointed to increased activities in the fall.

The railroads continue to feel the effects of conditions in many lines of industry and in some sections continue to reduce working forces.

An improvement was noted in the textile industries, especially in the Central Pennsylvania field. Some factories reported they had enough orders to keep them working full force until autumn.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 11 (I.N.S.) Here's one prisoner under life sentence in Eastern Penitentiary who apparently is enjoying himself behind bars and within prison walls. As a matter of fact he's growing so fat that his friends—sixteen hundred of them —are worried about him and have had him put on a diet.

He's "Pep," former Governor Gifford Pinchot's hunting dog, sentenced to spend the rest of his life here for murder of a number of Mrs. Pinchot's favorite cats.

"Pep" carried on a campaign against all cats at Pinchot's country home in Millard county, until the then Governor was forced to "give him the works," in prison parley—impose life imprisonment.

"Pep" is such a favorite among the 1600 lonely men in the prison, however, that they literally stuffed him with sweets and dainty tidbits they purchased with their earnings. As a result "Pep" grew fat and lazy, and no longer was feared by prison cats.
Now he's on a strict diet, and is rapidly becoming more active—much to the dismay of the aforementioned cats.

BRISTOLIANS, IN DESIRE TO "SEE AMERICA FIRST," TRAVERSE MUCH OF WESTERN TERRITORY

Mrs. G. A. Hussey and Friends from New Jersey Visit Many National Parks — Trip Made in Automobile — Miss Winifred Hussey Joins Group in California

It was on May 2nd that two automobiles, carrying nine people, each with the keen desire to "see America first," left Bristol for points west.

One of the travelers was a Bristol-ian, Mrs. George A. Hussey, of 336 Dorrence street; and the others composing the party were: Mr. and Mrs.
Maurice Hussey, the Misses Jean and Alberta Loftus, Dr. and Mrs. James Baldus and daughters, the Misses Margaret and Gertrude Baldus, all of Dover, N. J.

Three weeks were consumed in the journey to the Pacific Coast, but in the interim the nature seekers found much to interest them. Passing through Lancaster, Pa., a small portion of West Virginia was traversed, then going through Ohio and a few central states the group made a stop at Lyons, Kansas. A two days' stop was made at that point, the layover providing time for a visit to the salt mines. During a night spent in Hutchinson, Kansas, word was received of a bad sand storm a few miles distant.
However, as the next day proved promising the motors of the two machines were started humming and the party proceeded. Before much terrifying was traversed they were enveloped in a heavy storm, with sand flying in every direction. For two hours they were unable to proceed and a view of the road ahead could not be obtained. This experience occurred in the plains section of Kansas.

Traveling on to Colorado, the nine found the famed springs and the Garden of the Gods all they had expected and more.

The changing colors of the Grand Canyon impressed all alike, and as one expressed it "One should spend a night camping by the canyon in order to fully appreciate it. This affords an opportunity to watch the varying colors as the moon and the rising and setting suns play upon the length and depth of rock." In a trip to the base of the canyon mules are used, these being the most surefooted animals for mountain climbing.

All were thrilled with the petrified forest as found in Arizona. This is the largest of its kind in the world.
The trees that have been turned to stone are not merely dark blotches against the earth, but one mass of changing color," said the member of the party from Bristol today. The trip from the Grand Canyon on the start to Arizona was over the Corley Highway, 10,000 feet high. This winds around the rim of the canyon and is wide enough for only one machine at a time. Once started an autoist can not turn back, but must continue on.
The road is not wide enough for a machine to turn around and retrace the road. The manner in which machines are assured of a clear stretch ahead is by official starters. The autos are run on scheduled time so those going west will not meet other vehicles traveling east, and vice versa.

"The way was treacherous and the driving especially difficult," said Mrs.
Hussey in speaking of that particular highway.

The night of rest after such a hazardous journey was spent at Victor, a small town 13,000 feet high. Here a gold mine was located. Canyon City and Albuquerque were next visited, two days being spent in viewing the latter city. "The vegetation on near Albuquerque is very good," Mrs. Hussey remarked, "but the other vast section of New Mexico is not pleasing as far as the dwellings in that section are adobe houses.

Passing up the Imperial Valley the group wended its way to Los Angeles, California. At Hollywood they saw "The Patent Leather Kid" in the making, and glimpsed two well-known motion picture stars.

At San Francisco they were joined by Mrs. Hussey's daughter, Miss Winifred Lassey, and her friend, Miss Lois Hawthorne, and together an enjoyable three weeks slipped by, in the western metropolis. Places of interest visited were: Stanford University at Palo Alto, and Presidio Park, a U. S.
Army base. At the large fishermen's wharf where so many fishing boats arrive at the end of day, there are small stoves extending for a distance of two blocks. On these were cooked all kinds of sea food such as fish, lobsters, crabs. Other articles of food were for sale so that a dinner might be procured right on the wharf. Tables were arranged for the patrons.

Twin Peaks were reached by automobile and from these points the surrounding country could be seen for miles. The Easterners were struck by the manner in which San Francisco is fortified, all precautions being taken at that point against invasion of the United States. Previous to sighting at that California city, two old missions were seen, one at Santa Barbara and the second at San Jose.

Citrus fruits were selling very cheap, lemons bringing 10 cents per dozen, or three dozen for 25 cents; and oranges were sold for 50 cents per four dozen. Cherries were quite plentiful in the cherry country near Oakland; and in that section the farmers use olive, pepper and cherry trees for shade purposes. Niles Canyon was the next point at which the group stopped, and then passing through Merced they reached Yosemite National Park. Here some of the peaks were capped with snow. For three days

SCOUTS ESTABLISHED IN CAMP AT FLEMINGTON

Discipline and Development Is in Charge of Several Commissioners

CAMP LOG IS BEING KEPT

The Boy Scouts are now established in their camp at Flemington, N. J.
The discipline at camp this year and its development is in charge of a group of Camp Commissioners elected the same as within a community having a Commissioned Government, with each Commissioner having a staff member as advisor.

One of the duties of the clerk of the Commission is the writing of a Daily Camp Log, and we thought that you might be interested in reading the first Log written by the first camp clerk at the first Bucks County Scout Camp. This Log was written by clerk Newtown Wismer, and reads as follows:

Almost all of the scouts arrived at Camp Buccoo before 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. "Jake" Warner was busy parking machines when they arrived. After climbing the hill, and boy, it's some hill, with their baggage, the scouts arrived at their tents. A wonderful view can be had from the tents for miles around.

An election of officers was held and everyone was acquainted. The following Commissioners were elected for the week: Mayor, Edward Garlitz; clerk, Newtown Wismer; commissioner of Sanitation, George Wetherill; commissioner of highways, Henry Barrett; commissioner of building, Irvin Warner.

The scouts were given an opportunity to go swimming, and everyone enjoyed himself perfectly in the old swimming hole. "Pop" Frayser then gave everyone a wonderful welcome by his good supper, and boy he can cook!

"Jake" Warner had the honor of lighting the first Camp Buccoo Camp fire with flint and steel. Many of the men on the staff gave talks and the scouts sang Camp Buccoo songs.
Marshmallows were toasted and everybody turned in.

The first night in camp was very

BRISTOL BOY PERFORMS
WHILE "PRO'S" WATCH

"Bill" Fine Showing Connie Mack How He Can Pitch

HAS FINE RECORD HERE

Bristol has an opportunity to get on the baseball map through the sturdy arm of William K. Fine, Jr., of 255 Wood street, young right hand pitcher of the Field Club, aspirant for honors in the Twilight League here.

"Bill," who has had all his experience so far on the local lots, has been serving them up to the heavy hitters of the Philadelphia Athletics for the last two weeks at Shibe Park, in their practice sessions before each game.

Through local sportsmen, who took an interest in the young pitcher, Fine was given the chance to become familiar with big league ways, and display his wares before that grand old baseball expert, "Connie Mack."

"Tick," as Fine is familiarly called by his many baseball friends, has everything that goes to make a first class moundsman. He is only 18 and stands over six feet, weighing 160 pounds and still growing. Control is his most valuable asset. He has a nice delivery with a sharp break on the inside of the plate; is cool in a tight situation, mixing them up with a fast one or a slow floater that has the batters swinging wildly at nothing.

Fine is also handy with the bat having an average of .298, quite a nice average for a pitcher. Watching the youngster in a league game the other evening against the fast moving Keystone Club, Bill held them to one scratch hit, a fast line drive in the infield which an infielder should have nailed, spoiling "Billy's" chances for a no-hit game.

It is hoped that the experience "Billy" will get through his contact with such stars as "Ty" Cobb, Eddie Collins, Rube Walberg and others, and the advice he no doubt will get will help him make a name for himself in his chosen profession and also help blazon the name of Bristol on the big league map.

P. O. S. of A. Band Will Appear at Harriman

Tonight the P. O. S. of A. band will make its first public appearance at the Country Fair to be given by the Harriman M. E. Sunday School on the church lawn.

There will also be a sketch given tonight and tomorrow night in conjunction with the affair. It is entitled "Borrowing Trouble," and will be under the auspices of the Harriman Men's Club.

Various articles will be placed on sale, such as fancy work, ice cream, soft drinks, hot dogs, groceries and candy.

Committee To Meet To Arrange Flower Show

At eight o'clock this evening the committee in charge of the preparations for the annual flower show will meet at the home of Mrs. G. L. Williams, Radcliffe street, to consider plans for the exhibition of 1927.

It is thought by the committee members that the display this year will exceed those of previous years as dal-lias at present are in excellent shape due to the recent rains.

As mentioned by one member of the committee today the show is not staged for the purpose of making money, but it is the desire of those in charge to have it well patronized in order that expenses may be met.

HEAD STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE AND
YOUTH IS KILLED

Was Leaning Out of Machine
As It Sideswiped Another Automobile

DRIVER IS ARRESTED

He Declares He Had Victim
Out for Ride to Sober Him Up

His head crushed when two automobiles sideswiped late yesterday afternoon on the Feasterville-Churchville Pike, near Churchville, Bucks County, George White, 21 years old, of 1012 Wallace street, Philadelphia, was instantly killed.

George Palmer, 32 years old, of the same address, who was operating the car in which the youth met his tragic death, was later placed under arrest.
He was committed to the Bucks County Jail at Doylestown and will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace Irving M. James at Doylestown on a charge of manslaughter. Authorities say that he may also be charged with drunken driving.

White's death was due to a bad fracture of the skull. His head was extending over the side of the touring car at the time of the crash. None of the other occupants of the two cars received any injuries.

According to the story told to Dr.
John J. Sweeney, Bucks County coroner by Palmer, White was under the influence of liquor and Palmer was taking him out for a ride to sober him up.

Palmer and his wife, who is a nurse connected with the Philadelphia W. C.
T. U., were sitting on the front seat while his daughter, Ida, 10 years old, was sitting on the rear with White.

Palmer was turning a bend in the road when he struck a car driven by Mrs. Sarah Cary, of 19 West Centre street, Newtown, Pa. She was accompanied by her grandfather, Martin Sickle, of Newtown. Both machines were badly damaged. White's body was left in the car until the arrival of Coroner Sweeney, and was later taken to the undertaking establishment of Guy Leedom, of Southampton.

Palmer told the authorities that a third car crowded him on the road, but Mrs. Cary said there was no other machine at the scene.

Palmer, who is the owner of a farm at Pineville, Pa., was taken into custody today by Martin Desher, of the Pennsylvania State Highway Patrol.
Coroner Sweeney will later conduct an inquest at Richboro.

Tullytown

The carnival which was held on the school grounds on Friday and Saturday evenings, under auspices of the Tullytown A. A., was well attended both evenings and a success. It is not known as yet just what the proceeds were. The committee in charge of the affair is as follows: Pierson Burton, William Swigler, William Sweeney, Carman DiCicco and Earl Nickerson.

The forty-third annual meeting of the William Penn Mutual Loan and Building Association of Tullytown will be held at the office of the secretary, W. Lovett Leigh, of Main street, on Monday evening, August 15th, at seven o'clock. The association will open its thirty-fourth series for new shares. The Tullytown association is known to be one of the most prosperous in this vicinity. The secretary is at his office the third Monday of each month to accept dues. He also sits at Dougherty's Printing office, Cedar street, Bristol, the third Tuesday between the hours of nine and two for the convenience of the shareholders living in or near Bristol. The new series of shares will remain open for one week from August 15th to August 20th.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Erwin, of Fallington avenue, have returned to their home after spending a week at High Point, N. J.

Miss Dorothy Ritchie, of Darby, was a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs.
Christopher A. Johnson, of Main street, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Cole and daughter, of Morrisville, were visitors with relatives in town Sunday.

LEASES PROPERTY

The Clymer Maytag Co. has leased the property on Mill street now occupied by Percy G. Ford and will take possession October 1st. Mr. Ford will move to his new sales and service station on Farragut avenue.

ter, Miss Martha Eisenbrey, of Morrisville, Pa.

HARD TO BELIEVE NOW

Current talk relative to a possible shortage of landing fields in the near future as the ships of the ether become more plentiful causes one to wonder just how many years hence this congestion will occur.

Many of us are dubious at times, and are probably guilty of not giving enough serious thought to the matter.

It was but two or possibly four years ago that the passing over of an aeroplane was an event in any small town. Today the slowly growing number of planes seen in the sky each day causes all to be less inquisitive. Several months ago at the sound of a whirling motor of one of these ships children and grown-ups alike would hurry from their homes in answer to the one word, "Aeroplane."

This curious time has passed by, as the planes increase in number; and there are but few people who have not inspected at close range more than one type of plane.

Comparing this feeling of curiosity with one akin to it provoked by the small number of automobiles two decades ago, many odd incidents will be recalled. A motor-driven vehicle for travel on land at that time was a curiosity in many towns, and with awe did the tots and some older folks as well look upon the proud owner of a "gas-buggy."

There was always plenty of parking space in those days, and no one feared to drive afar because of the problem of "traffic."

A few years from now we will probably be comparing the air-lane problem to the small number of airships seen two or three years ago, and wonder how such a marked change could possibly come about.

Heeding of the warning of those whose interests center upon the development of the air-ways and have a close knowledge of advancement made from day to day, may cause avoidance of possible serious problems of the future.

Bristol is on the direct route of planes plying between New York and Philadelphia and Washington and talk is being agitated for a landing field here. Bristol is advancing in other lines. Will she be in the front ranks of those looking to the future of aviation?

THE WORM TURNS

Fish and game conservation is not a new thing in these extravagant and wasteful United States, but the Long Island village which placed a ban on digging for angle worms within the corporate limits by anyone but residents of the town invented something new in conservation. The fishing worm ordinance is not a fish conservation measure but an out and out move to save the worm.

It does best all how the American people waste the natural resources of the country, and how this profligate generation threatens posterity with an inadequate supply of bait. The time may come when the government will find it necessary to limit the size of the bait can to restrain youths with a capitalistic turn of mind from offering fishing worms for sale.

Of course the Association for the Conservation of the Angle Worm will recruit the cooperation of the fish conservation leagues and the anti-vivisection society. Fish cannot live without worms and surely only a barbarian could stick a barb into a poor squirming worm in cold blood.

The worm is coming into its own.

Irish Hearts

"IRISH HEARTS," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Emmett Murtough, a gay, carefree youth of Kilmannaul, a village on the West Coast of Ireland, near Knockbotherum, decides to go to America. He is in love with Sheila, daughter of Old Tom Kildare, and asks her to wait until he can send for her. She doubts his stability for he has flirted dangerously with the girls of the countryside, including Auntie Finnegan, daughter of Denis Finnegan, a hard man, but she gives her promise.

Other guests entered the inn and gathered at the bar for a bit of appetizer. Emmett did not arrive until just time for them to sit down at the tables. He was dressed in his best, and the black hair above the yellow light of the ceiling lamps above the banquet board. Good natured gibes greeted him.

"Tis a long swim back home!" "A longer walk than from here to Knockbotherum!" "An' no pleasant stops on the way!"

But the Murtough was unaffected by these quips. Here was the farewell supper prepared and arranged in his honor, and everyone of importance in the village was there. What mattered it to him if a few of the jealous and envious tried to tease him? They would be glad if only they had a chance to play the part.

It was a merry supper. The squire himself came down from his home on the hill and with his relatives that were sweet to the Murtough praised the adventurous spirit of one of Kilmannaul's lads and predicted in drowsy language prosperity beyond words for the adventurer in the new world. Father O'Keefe, too, spoke in laudatory rhetoric of the boy who was about to leave the old home-side for an unknown country across the Atlantic. Good ale and wassail had warmed the hearts even of the envious, and through it all Emmett Murtough boasted and bragged of what the future would bring to him and what he would do in America. In their merriment the diners did not see a bent figure enter and walk swiftly around to behind the Murtough's place of honor. Suddenly Murtough was swung out of his chair and to his feet to face Denis Finnegan.

"Ye scut, ye! Ye'll go away, will ye, an' break yer promise, ye lying devil!" Emmett Murtough threw his arm up defensively as Denis swung his riding crop. A livid welt rose on the cheek of Murtough. Again and again the rod descended across the head and shoulders of the younger man. Emmett folded his arms about his head to protect himself, but Finnegan continued to rain blow after blow upon him.

The guests, astonished at the suddenness of the onslaught, sat in amazement. The Squire and Father O'Keefe were the first to reach the infuriated Finnegan. They dragged him away.

"What's the meaning of this?" demanded the Squire. "Ask the lying scut, he knows," replied Finnegan scurly. "I'll teach him to leave decent men's daughters alone, damn him!" He broke from the grasp of the Squire and with one hand flung Emmett Murtough's face upward into his. "Get out of here! If ye are in Kilmannaul an hour from now, God help ye!" he cried and flung the boy from him. Turning on his heel, Denis Finnegan walked from the room, and hardly had he reached the door when he called for his drink when Emmett Murtough fled through the door of the inn and into the night.

Sheila was reading while waiting for the return of Old Tom from the supper to Emmett. The going of Emmett would be for the best, she had reasoned as she dreamed alone. She knew he was a wild one, but over there hard work would bring him to his own. She disliked leaving Kilmannaul. The village and the countryside and the sea were all dear to her. All of the Kildares and the O'wenes, her mother's people, had lived there save for those sons who had gone away to the wars which had visited every generation and to which both families had contributed of their men. Sheila never had loved anyone. Emmett was the only boy who had ever wooed her, and when once she had put him in his place she had found much to love in his carelessness and the very youth of him.

Sheila started. "Who could that be?" she murmured to herself as she crossed to the door. "Who's there?" she called.

"Tis me—Emmett! Open the door—hurry!"

"Emmett! Why, what is it? An' ye'r hurt! There's blood upon yer face! What's happened?"

"Quick! I can't tell you now." He dropped a carpet bag at his feet. "I've got to borrow yer pony an' ride to Knockbotherum the night. Hurry! Get the lantern an' let me saddle him."

"But, tell me, what has happened—what has happened, Emmett, darling?"

"Tis Old Finnegan. The man's crazy. He just attacked me at the inn! I couldn't fight back; I couldn't hurt the old man. An' he's after me now! I've got to get to Knockbotherum!"

Sheila hurried to the kitchen and lighted the lantern with Emmett at her heels. Soon they had caught the pony and Emmett quick saddled him. He tied the carpet bag to the saddle and made ready to be off.

"Oh, Emmett, an' what have ye done that Denis Finnegan should be down on ye?"

"Nothing, I tell ye. The old man's just crazy. I did nothing, nothing."

"An' ye'r going away now an' this is to be goodbye?"

"I've got to, Sheila, darling; I've got to."

"Oh, Emmett, an' suppose I never see ye again! An' such a leave taking! Emmett, Emmett!"

"There, there, Sheila; don't take on. Sure an' I'll write to ye soon an' I'll be sooner that I'll be sending for ye to come to America to me."

Sheila flung herself into the Murtough's arms and lifted her lips for his kiss. Surely it was not the sweet farewell of which she had been dreaming there in the cottage such a short time ago. Murtough hugged her to him, then flung himself into the saddle. Sheila ran after him to the roadside and waved to the disappearing rider, who never so much as turned his head, but spurred on toward Knockbotherum until swallowed in the darkness of the night.

CHAPTER III

New York City

The scandal at O'Rell's Inn was a nine days' wonder from Kilmannaul to Knockbotherum, and the gossip, their tongues let loose upon a juicy morsel, painted Emmett Murtough in black, black colors. There were no defenders for the emigrant now on board ship for America. Even Old Tom Kildare, who, it is true, did defend him to Sheila in the privacy of their own home, was silent among his neighbors. All the sympathy was for poor Annie Finnegan, who had been promised the ring; and Denis was commended highly for his lacing of the impudent philanderer.

"He should have killed the scut," was the general opinion of the countryside, and fathers whose daughters had entertained the gay Murtough questioned them pointedly.

The gossip ceased and the scandal passed into village history several weeks later when the banns were published for the marriage of Annie Finnegan and John Gormley, the blacksmith, whose shop was situated on the other side of Knockbotherum. The wedding was held at the earliest possible date thereafter, and Annie Finnegan that was, was congratulated, and so, too, was John Gormley, for all of Kilmannaul knew that Annie was a good girl in spite of the ship.

Sheila suffered deeply. She had known that Emmett was a playful fellow, but never did she believe that he would be guilty of such an offense. The night of his running away in all its detail passed through her mind every day as the weeks rolled on. Sheila remembered the welts on his face and the blood and his hurry to be off and the lack of love and affection in his farewell. That hurt most of all. Now she never could go to him over there in America. That she knew. Even her father seemed less enthusiastic about the match, although Old Tom dreamed of the land across the sea and frequently mumbled his regret that he himself in his younger days had not undertaken the voyage. But he did not press the wish to join Emmett upon Sheila.

CLEMENCEAU'S SUMMER HOME

Clemenceau's Garden In Pure Sand Most Beautiful On Vendee Coast

By Frederic K. Abbott
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
ST. VINCENT-SUR-JARD, France, Aug. 11.—"The Grand Old Man of France," Georges Clemenceau, who will be eighty-six in September, has the most beautiful garden on the Vendee coast, say the local connoisseurs, and another "Grand Old Man," Louis Esnard, age seventy-two, is responsible for it.

France's War Premier has his summer place here on the very tip end of a peninsula, as the townsfolk say—"at the end of the world!" There isn't another house for more than a mile from the aged statesman's long, low, one-story six-room house.

But it is here Georges Clemenceau spends his summers, almost a hermit, and wanders about his garden or sits on the numerous rustic benches and looks off over the sea, and the world wonders what he is thinking about as his gaze wanders out over the waves that roll in at his very feet.

"I've seen Monsieur le President sit like that for hours at a time," says Louis Esnard, his gardener, "and then he would discover another spot where the view pleased him and he would get up and come over to me where I'd be working and say, 'Louis, don't you think we could put up another bench there?' and he would point to the spot. The next day he always found the new bench where he wanted it."

"And it mustn't be new either—the President always wanted things to look old and time-worn, so I have to find old wood to make the benches out of. Look over there!" and the old gardener pointed to a spot under a clump of pine trees on the very edge of the ocean, "there's four benches there alone and if you'll notice carefully, you'll see that each one of them faces a different direction."

Proud of the Garden

The gardener is proud of the President's garden and he is proud to relate what a pleasure his employer takes in it.

"I wanted to pull up all that rank weed over there by the well, but the President wouldn't let me. He said, 'Why, Louis, it's just like walking on a carpet to walk on those weeds, you mustn't pull them out.' So of course I left them, but I do trim 'em down."

Many who live in the district and those who have visited the ex-Premier's home on the dunes, are unable to understand how such a beautiful garden could be made to grow in pure sand. The soil is nothing more than a sand beach and the hardest sort of land to cultivate.

Nevertheless, there is a veritable riot of colors in flowers of all sorts, perennials, dahlias, daisies, sunflowers, gladioli, nasturtiums, carnations and roses.

"It takes twenty thousand gallons of water a day to keep the garden fresh," said Louis, "and then I couldn't do it properly if it weren't for a scheme that the President thought of. Three years ago we had a drought and water was scarce. Monsieur le President was worried, I could see it in his face when he saw his favorite flowers withering. I couldn't help it, I gave them all the water I could. He came to me one morning almost with tears in his eyes, and said:

"What are we going to do, Louis?"

Keep Fit!

Good Health Requires Good Elimination

To be well, you must keep the blood stream free from impurities. If the kidneys lag, allowing body poisons to accumulate, a toxic condition is created. One is apt to feel dull, languid, tired and aching. A nagging backache is sometimes a symptom, with drowsy headaches and dizzy spells. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. If you have reason to suspect improper kidney functioning, try Doan's Pills—a tested stimulant diuretic. Users praise them throughout the United States. Ask your neighbor!

"I don't know that we can do any more than we are, Monsieur le President," said I.

"Why don't you try putting wet seaweed on the sand?" said the president. Covered With Seaweed
"And that was the answer. Now, as you see, I keep the entire property covered with seaweed and that retains the moisture for days."

Here the old gardener lifted a bit of seaweed and showed that although that section had not been watered since the day before the sand was still quite damp underneath.

"We have a well two hundred yards inland," explained Louis, "and with the gasoline motor I pump the water into that tower. The pump runs ten hours a day, but Monsieur le President must have his garden. Why, he could only stay twenty days last year among his flowers and the morning he left he took a last walk around with me."

"He was the saddest man you ever saw as he turned to me and said: 'Oh, Louis, how I hate to leave all this for Paris.' And I said, 'Monsieur le President has but to remain,'—but he said he had affairs that called him to Paris and so at eighty-five, he had to leave for that terrible hot city. Leave all those beautiful flowers I'd spent the whole season preparing for him."

"But this year I hope he'll be able to pass his eighty-sixth birthday here among the flowers he loves and I've done my best so that he'll find them even more beautiful than ever."

DAILY NEWS LETTER

By Alice Langeller

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
PARIS, Aug. 11.—As a pleasant little thought for summer, Charles Clerc, a Frenchman, suggests the formation of an Academy of Smokers. He points out that humorists, sportsmen, dancers and writers all have their own academies, and why not smokers, who are certainly much more numerous and have a similar elite.

Another Frenchman in favor of the idea says that this academy would necessarily be an academy of philosophers which is very much desired in these strenuous days. He thinks that the artistic side of smoking should be emphasized and would be with an academy of this sort.

Rene Doumie says he will join if there is any prospect of getting better cigars for one's money.

Far from falling out of favor since the high rise in the prices of tobacco some time ago, smoking is on the increase in France, according to figures covering the first six months of this year. During this period the revenue from tobacco sales amounted to 1,740,000 francs, an increase of 445,000, 000 francs over the corresponding period last year. June of this year was the most flourishing month for smokers.

The tobacco monopoly announces that two new brands of very light cigars will shortly be on sale in ornamental packets of fifty cents and a dollar each. Magna cigars at fifteen cents and Manadars at twenty will also be on sale soon.

Six hundred and twenty-five persons committed suicide in France last year.

The majority of them, 197, used firearms to do it; the next largest number, 91, drowned themselves in some stream. Fifty-seven threw themselves from some high monument and fifty more were asphyxiated by gas. Only twenty-one took poison.

Bachelors commit suicide more often than married men, according to a recent study of 307 cases made by the French physician, Dr. Serin. He also finds that suicide is adopted as a way out of life's problems more frequently by men than women and more often by elderly ones than the mere adult.

Dr. Serin divides the causes of suicide into five classes: Insanity, alcoholism, severe grief, incurable diseases and poverty.

While hundreds of gay Parisians were boarding the famous "Blue Train" to take them to Deauville, five hundred sick pilgrims took places in the "White Train" leaving for Lourdes, firm in the faith that in the celebrated Grotto of the Virgin miraculous cures will take place for the lame, the halt and the blind. Nothing is more impressive than the departure of this White Train every summer at this season. Many of the pilgrims afflicted with diseases that have warped and ravaged their bodies, but have failed to weaken the supreme hope that a miracle will be accomplished in the famous waters of the Grotto. This faith has tured many of them.

A young Roumanian girl, Mademoiselle Stephanie Maracheanu, has recently tried to demonstrate before the French Academy of Sciences that radio activity is not a spontaneous property in itself, but that the action of the sun can modify it and even transmit it to certain bodies which do not possess this property.

The young doctors of sciences interested the old scholars very much, 'tis said—without completely convincing them.

The Lindbergh "frock" is the newest creation of a fashionable French dressmaker on the Champs Elysees. It comes in a charming shade of gray crepe de chine, a pearl tint with a touch of rose. The bodice is formed of very small transversal-pleats and the skirt of larger ones of the same type. A plain belt divides the two. When the wearer moves or there is a slight breeze the effect is delightful.

State News

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 10 (I.N.S.)—General John Hartranft, hardy old Civil War veteran, and fifty years ago Governor of Pennsylvania, is going to retreat at last.

For more than thirty years the equestrian statue of the General has commanded an unobstructed view of inaugural ceremonies of each incoming Governor, from his vantage point immediately in front of the Capitol facing the parkway leading to the Susquehanna river. Now landscape artists have decided the Governor-warrior must be removed, and the statue will be placed before the south office building on the other side of the Capitol.

Park attaches hasten the assurance, however, that the General's new post will command a larger park area, fronting the new memorial bridge and new office buildings.

Bristolians, In Desire To "See America First," Cover Much Of Western Territory

they watched the water falling over the cliffs and viewed the valleys and hills. Yosemite Falls is 7000 feet high and the Bridal Veil Falls the same height. The roar of the water could be heard for a great distance. One feature of entertainment was a war dance about a camp fire performed in an Indian camp one evening while at Yosemite. Also each night there is built a huge bon-fire and when it rages it is pushed over a high cliff, making the "Fire Falls." The occurrence each night is eagerly waited for by tourists.

Two new annexes have just been completed at the capitol in Sacramento, and the New Jersey and Pennsylvania residents passed through these. For some time the travelers watched Mount Lassen, the only volcano in this country, as it continuously emitted steam.

Going on to Oregon, Salem and Portland were on the route of travel. The great lumbering country was passed through, and here the 11 saw logs shot through troughs to the river and then floated downstream. Going within sight of Mount Hood the company passed around the 170-mile loop and up the Columbia River Highway. "The nearest we were to Mount Hood was 30 miles, but it seemed as if we were right by it," said the Bristolian. "We were above the clouds at times and the drivers had to use the windshield wipers quite frequently." Along the Old Oregon Trail marks were seen on the trees from the time the trail was blazed.

Camp Lewis, the largest government camp in the confines of the United States, gave forth new points of interest and journeying on to Tacoma the crowd arrived soon at Mt. Rainier Park. Here it was necessary for visitors to go through snow tunnels to get to the inn. They were told that on the second of last month, following the hardest winter experienced for several years, visitors were compelled to walk over snow so deep they entered the inn at the third story windows. The caretaker of the inn at Mt. Rainier Park is really a prisoner all winter. Each fall he enters the structure equipped with supplies to last for several months, and is unable to get out of the building after the winter's snow commences.

Unique means of travel are employed so that visitors might see the glories of the reservation. Several of the group from the East traveled about the park on a dog sled. The team of nine dogs is driven by an Alaskan.

At Seattle a pleasant visit was had with Carl Comfort, a former Bristol man. Then traveling east over the Nevada Mountains the group reached Spokane. The last portion of the journey to Spokane took them through the apple country and the orchards stretched out for acre upon acre.

Enroute through the state of Montana the Capt. John Mullen Trail was used. This is the same as the Yellowstone Trail. Passing into Yellowstone National Park at Gardiner, Montana, 4 days were consumed in viewing the works of nature there and watching the animals. The hot springs, Old Faithful and other geysers were thrilling. Old Faithful shooting each time a distance of 175 feet into the air.

"The Paint Pot was lovely," said Mrs. Hussey. "It was as large as a fair-sized room and the bubbling mass reminded one of boiling white lead." The "Handkerchief Pool" was all colors and equally as pretty as the former.

The "Dragon's Mouth" was referred to, the same belching forth hot water all the time. The Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone, although smaller than many canyons in this country was a sight worth seeing.

Speaking of the animals in the national park at Yellowstone, Mrs. Hussey referred to the hold-up bears. One mother bear in particular has trained her two cubs well. Oftentimes as an automobile approaches the bear will send one of her young out into the road where it proceeds to lie down in line with the approaching vehicle. When the travelers stop and give sweets to the bears which they crave the autoists may pass on. Many have seen the mother bear "box" the ears of one of the cubs if they were too slow in starting for a machine.

The smelting plant at Anaconda, Montana, was shown to the group; and they were struck with the condition of the roads in that territory. Most of the surface is of adobe clay, and when this becomes wet the surface is in extremely bad shape. However, after the sun shines on same for a brief period it becomes as hard as stone.

Some sections of North and South Dakota were seen by the sight-seers on the homeward trip, and a short stop made in Chicago, Ill. Miss Hawthorne left the group at Brookfield while the remainder of the party proceeded to their homes in Bristol and Dover, N. J.

Scouts Established In Camp At Flemington successful, and all the boys behaved well. The honor tent for the day went to some boys from Langhorne No. 1 and South Langhorne No. 1.

The Sunday dinner meal couldn't be beat. Many visitors from all parts of Bucks County were here in the afternoon. The scouts had their first taste of rain in camp at about 4:30, before mess. The store opened after mess, and each scout was allowed 10c worth of candy, which is the daily limit.

Various organizations are combining throughout the county to make possible a BIG BROTHER CAMP during the week of August 27th to September 3rd for boys who are not scouts, and who cannot afford to be at camp. The Community Nurse Association is being asked to co-operate in the selection of these boys. The following reservations have been made:
